The School of Music is one of the largest music schools in the state of Texas. Undergraduate and graduate programs of excellence are offered in theory, performance, composition, history, pedagogy, and music education. Its distinguished faculty, in terms of both academic and performing credentials, is comparable to that of the nation's leading institutions. This strength was noted in a recent report from a reviewing panel of eminent music administrators: "We see no reason why this should not become, within the next 10 years, one of the major academic music programs in the nation."

The School of Music currently enrolls more than 400 music majors, a population which includes students from many other areas of the country, as well as Canada, Europe, Mexico, and the Far East. Since the first degree programs in music at the University of Houston were instituted in 1941, the School of Music has graduated literally thousands of superbly trained musicians. Eighty percent of University of Houston graduates remain in the area, providing a major infusion of performers and teachers into professional performance organizations, churches, public and private
